

Quotations

There are only two emotional attitudes through which human life can be radically determined: love and fear. Love is the positive principle, fear the negative. Love is the principle of life, while fear is the death-principle in us. John MacMurray.

The brain does not generate thought, the body does not generate the soul, any more than the wire generates electric current. Paul Brunton.

If the world stands bewildered and confused in the face of its trouble, it is partly because we Westerners have made a God of activity; we have yet to learn how to be, as we have already learnt how to do. Paul Brunton, 1949.

The nuclear threat is the dark side of science. David Bohm.

All education should be directed toward the refinement of the individual's sensibilities in relation not only to one's fellow humans everywhere, but to all things whatsoever. Ashley Montagu.

It is impossible for any civilisation to survive without a faith in meanings and values transcending the utilitarianism of comfort and survival - in other words without a religious faith. E. F. Schumacher.

The task is not so much to see what no one has seen yet; but to think what no one has thought yet, about what everybody sees. Schopenhauer.

Most of our anxieties, problems and unhappiness today stem from a lack of purpose which was rare a century ago and which can fairly be blamed on the consequences of scientific enquiry. Sir George Parker, FRS.

In life we attend to the urgent things instead of the important things. Pir Vilayat Khan.

A specialist is someone who knows more and more about less and less, until he manages to know everything about nothing. George Bernard Shaw.